YOUR LEARNING JOURNEY

Research suggests that learning is very context-dependent — the closer that learning occurs to the point of usage, the more impactful the learning is. So, when it comes to sustainably developing knowledge, learning-by-doing is more impactful when combined with formal training and mentorship. That is why we adopted the 70/20/10 framework into our learning process.

Learn It

You will start the first stage of your journey by learning all about SCC®'s conceptual framework through a self-paced eLearning program. Built to accommodate your objectives and time requirements, you can start and finish the module anytime you want. There will roughly be 12 hours worth of bite-sized videos (4 modules) where you'll learn how to coach leaders like Marshall Goldsmith. The community function is at your disposal whenever you need help and support to keep you accountable with your progress.

Earn It

After completing your eLearning modules, you will practice your coaching with "7 Skill Practice" sessions. These will be a 90-minute Zoom session where you'll work with other coaches each week for two months. During this stage you'll be invited to a monthly Founders Q&A Zoom session with seasoned SCC coaches and other coaches going through the certification process.

Live It

At any time after starting the "7 Skill Practice", you must apply your knowledge and skill through a real-life coaching engagement with a leader. This will be a 6-month engagement, where at the end you will measure your coaching impact using our proprietary tool (The Mini Survey™) which provides concrete evidence of your ability to help clients improve their leadership skills & behavior.

WHAT YOU'LL GET AFTER COMPLETING YOUR JOURNEY

MGSCC lifetime certification

36 ICF CCE credits

Public coach profile featured on our website

PROGRAM FACULTY

Frank Wagner

Frank Wagner co-developed the proprietary SCC® methodology that has revolutionized leadership coaching around the world. He has worked together alongside Marshall Goldsmith for more than 4 decades, and now he acts as the co-founder and Master Coach at MGSCC® who specializes in a common sense approach when it comes to leadership coaching.

The way Frank works with Leaders is different than most of his fellow Stakeholder Centered coaches in the degree to which he stays in the background. He minimizes contact with Stakeholders as he wants the key interactions to be between the Leader and the Stakeholders. By requiring Leaders to take responsibility and accountability for such tasks as recruiting their own Stakeholders, he feels this strengthens the relationships for the Leader at work and increases the recognition and credit for success.

Another differentiator in Frank's coaching is his requirement that Leaders choose only one leadership goal and one action plan. Experience has shown this concentration of effort impacts far more than the selected area of leader improvement. It changes the relationship. Frank's goal is for the Leader and the Stakeholders to get ALL the credit for the improvement in leadership. Frank himself finds fulfillment in simply contributing to the success of others and helping them realize their true potential.

Brandon James Mergard

As the CEO and Advanced Coach of Marshall Goldsmith Stakeholder Centered Coaching®, Brandon Mergard helps leaders of Fortune500 companies and SMEs improve their leadership skills using their proprietary SCC® methodology.

Being brought on as the youngest Senior Executive at MGSCC®, Brandon successfully revolutionized the entire company — achieving a 12x growth within 5 years. He prides himself in having a global mindset - having done his Undergraduate degree in the US, Graduate degree in the UK coupled with a decade-long professional experience around APAC, before settling down in the US.

Brandon aims to work with those who have the greatest potential for change, allowing them to believe in themselves more than ever before. He enjoys helping people see things from a different perspective, so they can solve problems they never thought possible, and help them achieve success in ways they have never thought about. The combination of his entrepreneurial and professional journeys allows him to do just that.
